

08/764500

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An information fragments editing system for getting information fragments from a variety of application programs to treat the obtained information with a direct method, such as movement, relation making, combination and separation by a mouse. The system has a function for storing the contents and attribute information of an information object to be shown, a function for showing the information object on a window in accordance with the stored information, a function for transmitting a control message to an external application program, a function for analyzing an event and a function for performing at least one of processes including a process for controlling the stored information, a process for controlling transmission of the control message to an external application program and a process for controlling drawing in such a manner that the information object is shown, in accordance with a result of analysis. When any information item in an external application program has been selected and an input event for obtaining the selected information has been analyzed, the selected information above is created as an information object to show the information object on the window.